For nearly two million Muslims living in Britain, the legacy of the 9/11 (2001) and 7/7 (2005) attacks has been one of continuing public suspicion and distrust. The intense media spotlight has led many to question whether their future here is secure, even those who have professional jobs and previously felt well integrated.

Following these events, a growing number of Muslims left the UK because they no longer felt comfortable living in their country of birth. In 2006, an ICM survey found that two thirds of
